feckcops These kids never fail to astound me. Their occupation of the so-called Equalities and Human Rights Commission (EHRC) this week is just their latest in a long campaign to demand better from the Government for trans kids. The immense courage, care, and skilful co-ordination they demonstrate at every action put most adults I know to shame. Witnessing these kids at work warms my heart and gives me so much hope for the future 🍷

The world is a terrifying place right now, especially for trans people. Now the entire establishment, from the pathetic centre-left to the hateful right has been captured by FARTs (feminism-appropriating radical transphobes), it can feel like the whole world is against us. When the very bodies set up to defend us become the same bodies issuing guidance to strip away our rights, exclude us and expose us to hate-fuelled violence, it's never been clearer we cannot rely on liberal institutions for protection. Keir Starmer, Wes Streeting and the so-called Equalities and Human Rights Commission are drowning in trans blood 💧

Never has it been clearer, we protect ourselves. We will keep pushing, keep fighting, keep taking action until every single trans person has the safety, dignity and healthcare they deserve. Trans kids deserve so much better than this pathetic spineless shitshow of a Government. We will never stop fighting for their future and ours. For a better world, one of dignity, love and care for all 💜💛💚💙

When trans rights are under attack, what do we do?
Stand up, fight back! 🍷

Not the cops, not the state.
We decide our own fate! 🍷

WE'RE LEAVING TINTAGEL HOUSE!

WHEN? 12 PM (noon) on the 30th of May.

There will be speeches from the young activists involved as we commemorate the end of our 5 day occupation, and we'd love for you to join us.

transkidsdeservebetter • Follow transkidsdeservebetter WE'RE LEAVING TINTAGEL HOUSE!! JOIN US FOR OUR ENDING CEREMONY TOMORROW (FRIDAY THE 30TH OF MAY) AT 12PM TO CELEBRATE THE WORK DONE BY THE BRAVE KIDS INVOLVED IN THIS ACTION.

The EHRC wants to push transgender people (especially trans femmes) out of public spaces. So we are here to show them that we will never let them force us to hide. The interim update regarding upcoming guidance has proved that the EHRC is not interested in the human rights of all, and instead wants to foster hatred and fear. We demand they listen to trans voices and show us respect. Trans men are men and trans women are women, and no guidance can change this fact.

Make some noise and show up for trans kids. Join us at Tintagel House, 92 Albert Embankment, London, SE1 7TY.

Trans Youth leave bloody handprints on NHS HQ in protest

One activist said 'I am taking part in this action because I'm tired of trans voices being silenced. It makes me sad that the NHS are disrespecting people who have sadly taken their own lives and are no longer with us. They may think this means no one will notice, they are wrong. I want to make a stand for people who can't because they deserve so much better than being forgotten.'

5/11/2025 · 1 min read

LONDON, WELLINGTON HOUSE, 11 MAY 2025- Armed with paintbrushes, spray bottles, and water-activated red facepaint, 5 young activists from Trans Kids Deserve Better left bloody handprints on the NHS HQ on Waterloo Road, with one writing 'RELEASE THE TRANS YOUTH SUICIDE REPORT'.

A report has been written by the National Child Mortality Database about improving suicide prevention strategies for trans kids. This report was completed in March 2024 - yet when the Good Law Project asked for a copy they were told that it was being withheld until 2026, due to ongoing conversations with NHS England. This equates to 2 years of trans kids being put through increasingly cruel climate, while explicitly hiding a resource with information that could save our lives.

Invoking the visuals used by ACT UP, the activists wore patches on their backs that featured trans flag triangles and read the words 'SILENCE = DEATH', among other slogans including 'RELEASE THE REPORT' and 'TRANS KIDS DESERVE BETTER.' In suppressing this research, the government actively contributes to our deaths.

One activist said 'I am taking part in this action because I'm tired of trans voices being silenced. It makes me sad that the NHS are disrespecting people who have sadly taken their own lives and are no longer with us. They may think this means no one will notice, they are wrong. I want to make a stand for people who can't because they deserve so much better than being forgotten.'

All activists safely fled the scene. The paint on NHS England's HQ will wash away with a wet cloth, unlike the suffering the government has caused the trans community. As one activist said "They have blood on their hands, and yet they act with ignorance. Now they have blood on their building, hopefully they'll notice this time."

To the NHS and our government: stop playing games with our lives. Release the report.

Teenage trans activists begin an encampment outside the office of Wes Streeting constituency

"We know what this decision will mean, we know what it will cost us, but we know our power, let's show him."

12/11/2024 · 1 min read

LONDON, OUTSIDE WES STREETING'S CONSTITUENCY OFFICE, 11 DECEMBER 2024, 8:00 PM Today young activists from Trans Kids Deserve Better established an encampment outside the constituency office of Wes Streeting the Secretary of State for Health and Social Care.

The decision to take up camp outside his office was made after the health secretary announced the permanent ban on the prescription of puberty blockers in the House of Commons.

The ban, based on the widely discredited Cass Review has stripped trans+ youth of one of the only sources of medical care that we have access to, including from private providers.

"Wes Streeting has chosen politics over our lives. We are being put through an experiment, but the experiment is to deny us healthcare, not to provide it. He wants to see what happens to us when we grow up permanently altered in ways we never wanted, and we never consented to be part of that."

Teenage trans activists perform die-in at Victoria station calling for the reversal of the ban on puberty blockers

"Trans kids are being bullied by our government under the guise of the flawed and biased Cass Review, but we continue to resist through our very existence."

11/27/2024 · 2 min read

LONDON VICTORIA STATION, 27 NOVEMBER 2024, 5:50 PM — 16 young trans activists from Trans Kids Deserve Better staged a die-in in Victoria station near the Department for Health and Social Care to protest the recent extension of the puberty blocker ban. They used headstones detailing something important to each of them in order to stress that trans people are real individuals whose lives and healthcare should not be politicised. The activists then walked these to the Department for Health and Social Care and left them outside.

The activists aimed to bring attention to the actions of Health Secretary Wes Streeting in relation to healthcare for young trans people and urge him to realise the damaging effects of his actions, which he has repeatedly ignored. The day marked the deadline for Wes Streeting to extend his temporary ban on puberty blockers. However, he did this instead on the 6th of November, just days after meeting with trans children whose wellbeing would be greatly affected by this. Streeting shows a clear lack of regard for trans children, and his actions can no longer be defended by naivety.

The puberty blocker ban outlaws the prescription of puberty blockers for trans children, citing a perceived lack of evidence that they are safe and effective based on the widely denounced and unscientific Cass Review. It does not outlaw their prescription for cis children experiencing precocious puberty. This is yet another example of the systemic denial of trans people's dignity, autonomy, and voice in healthcare.

In a speech outside of the Department of Health and Social Care during the action, one of the activists said:

"Today, the extension on the puberty blocker ban comes into force. This cruel decision was made by Health Secretary Wes Streeting, despite having met with trans youth and their families in this very building. During that meeting, Wes heard these kids' stories, and the devastating impact a ban would have on their lives and mental health, yet he heartlessly chose to go ahead with the extension. Trans kids are being bullied by our government under the guise of the flawed and biased Cass Review, but we continue to resist through our very existence. We are standing out here today because we should not have to die for people to start listening. We are standing out here today as a reminder of the strength and hope that flows through our community. We are standing here today because bans on gender-affirming care are not 'letting kids be kids'- they're killing them."
